Introduction

This guide provides instructions for applying license keys and other tasks associated with license activation, including setting up new users and activating new products.

How license keys are obtained

Your license activation key(s) is provided by Wolters Kluwer Customer Support in an email message. The activation key(s) is contained in a text file (.TXT) included as an attachment to the email.

How license keys are distributed

There are two ways of using CASH Suite; in a multi-user environment with a common database or in a stand-alone environment (on your workstation).

Shared Database Environment

When running CASH in a multi-user environment in which users share a common database, the license keys are applied once from any CASH client. Once applied, the keys are stored with the CASH Database. As users launch CASH, the new keys are distributed to the license database located in the CASH program path.

NOTE: This distribution method requires the user(s) to have modify permissions to the file SECURITY.MDB. The file located within the local program path, (e.g., C:\Program Files (x86)\CASH).

Stand Alone Environment

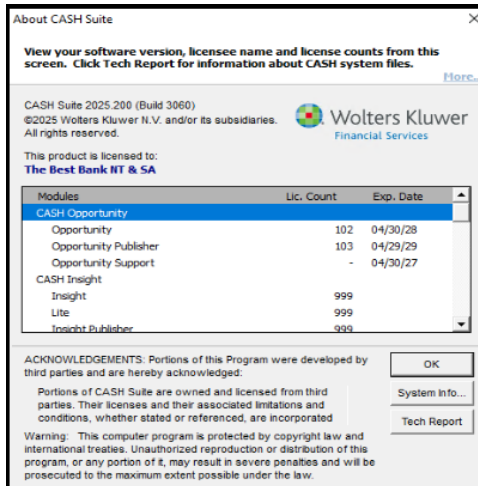

When running CASH in a stand-alone environment, the license key must be applied manually on each workstation.

How to determine your Software Version

When applying license keys, instructions vary with different software versions. Refer to the instructions below for assistance with determining your software version.

Running CASH to see my software version

If you can run CASH, launch the program and log in. Click Help>About CASH; the software version is clearly displayed on the About screen.

Unable to run CASH (my software has expired)

If you are not able to run CASH, open the C:\Program Files (x86)\CASH folder in Windows Explorer. In the program directory, find and open the Release Notes. The version is listed on page 1 of the Release Notes. The file name should read ServiceReleaseNotes.pdf with the version number appended to the filename.
